The Coming Election.

It is by no means an encouraging sign of a nation's vitality or hopefulness, when the near approach of the day for electing representatives to RETURNS THANKS FOR PAST PAVORS the Legislature fails to awaken any perceptible degree of solicitude or interest as to who are to be the members. Yet such is the case in Honolulu, and so far as we can learn, the same feeling prevails in most of the other districts throughout the Kingdom. The only persons who appear to bestow much thought upon the fact that next PAINTS, OILS. COLORS, Monday is the day for election of members to the national Legislative Assembly, are the candidates themselves, and of these it is true there are a goodly number. The personal friends of some of them are beginning to canvass to a small extent in the city, but the principal amount of work of this kind, if done at all before the day of election, is being done in a very quiet manner.

Years ago, a representative of the people was known in common parlance as a "luna wehe pilikia," or, to put it in English-" the burden reliever." The conception in the native mind originally being that the principal duty of a representative was to endeavor to lessen the burdens of the people. The experience gained by the lapse of years, has to a large extent dissipated this idea with the people, although we still see petitions brought forward every session, asking for the repeal of taxes which are considered burdensome. If the people at large were made aware of the fact that the policy of the Ministry is to get the country in debt as much as possible, they would probably understand the uselessness of petitioning for a reduction of taxes. These complaints of the burdens of the people are generally accompanied with urgent requests that the salaries of ministers be reduced. Five thousand dollars a year naturally sounds very large no little difficulty in raising five dollars with and Feary, who were which to pay his taxes. But all these petitions for lessening of burdens and reduction of salaries are received at each session as matters of course, excite little notice and no discussion, and disappear, never to be heard of again, in the committees to which they are referred as a matter of form. With this system going on for a long series of years, the general apathy that prevails among the people as to the election of a "luna wehe pilikia," is not surprising. And it is not among the natives alone that the lack of interest is manifested. Intelligent foreigners, who have long resided in the country, become naturalized, and have all their interests of family and home here, look upon the present system of Hawaiian parliaments as but little more than a costly farce, and they make no hesitation whatever in saying so. It is hopeless, they will tell you, to dream of carrying any measure of importance through the Legislature which does not meet with the approbation of the Ministry, and so it matters but very little who is elected. Surely, this is an anomalous state of things to be obliged to confess as existing in the pattern Kingdom of Polynesia. We do not however concede that no good can result from a choice of representatives. The presence of a few independent members in the house, who will fearlessly and intelligently discuss matters of national importance, is necessary for the information of the country at large, and for the creation of a correct and enlightened public opinion. The Ministers themselves, if they are honest as well as wise, will welcome an honest opposition. The governmental policy that shrinks from a close and searching scrutiny, laying it open to the public examination, must be
